HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION
6 November, 2012 is a very important day in the history of the Cayman Islands. This is Implementation Day, the day on which Part I of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 2009 – the Bill of Rights, Freedoms and Responsibilities comes into effect.

Human rights are the essential rights and freedoms which all individuals are entitled to regardless of their nationality and citizenship. These rights are fundamental to maintaining a fair and just society. Ensuring they are upheld becomes a responsibility for public officials: they have a duty under the Constitution to ensure that all acts they carry out and decisions they make are carried out or made in a lawful, rational, proportionate and procedurally fair manner in accordance with the Bill of Rights, Freedoms and Responsibilities.

The 2009 Constitution gives you yet greater protection for your rights and freedoms and greater authority to defend them. Adherence to the Bill of Rights, Freedoms and Responsibilities will help us to become a stronger society where all human beings are equally valued, can participate fully and are treated with fairness, dignity and respect.

In the following pages local artists have depicted their interpretation of the rights, freedoms and responsibilities provided for in our Constitution. I commend them for this imaginative and creative support for the Human Rights Commission’s efforts to help the people of the Cayman Islands understand these important rights. The Governor’s Office is proud to support this publication and I encourage you to use these depictions and visit www.humanrightscommission.ky to ensure you understand your rights, learn how to protect them and learn how the Constitution provides for your rights to be respected.
As Chairman of the Human Rights Commission I am pleased to present to the people of the Cayman Islands – the Bill of Rights, Freedoms and Responsibilities as depicted by our local artists. These local artists are truly dedicated to enhancing and inspiring the Cayman Islands through their art and the Commission is both privileged and grateful to have partnered with them in this educational initiative.

The rights depicted throughout this book are done in order to enhance the knowledge of our youth with respect to their human rights, while also promoting the importance and democratic values contained within the Bill of Rights, Freedoms and Responsibilities amongst those who form the next generation. These rights are fundamental to the lifestyle we are all so blessed to enjoy in the Cayman Islands. The people of these islands have fought for these rights and it is our duty to continue to work to ensure our future generations receive the same or better rights than we do today. With these rights come freedoms but so too come responsibilities. We look to our Government to ensure that the people of the Cayman Islands are treated with dignity and respect, fairly and humanely, lawfully and rationally through sound policies, procedures and legislation.

As you view the content of this book the Commission would like you to remember that these are YOUR rights and as the Commission continues to seek to promote, protect, and preserve human rights for the people of the Cayman Islands we hope you will join us to embrace the journey and the challenges which lie ahead.
Guarantee of Rights and Freedoms

The Bill of Rights is Part One of the Cayman Islands Constitution, which is the highest law of the land. Laws make sure Government is fair and protects everyone who lives in these islands.

All of the rights in the Bill of Rights affect how Government treats you. They are rules we should all try to follow to make the Cayman Islands a safer and fair place to live.

Life

We are all human beings. Our lives are the most basic things we have. It does not matter who you are or where you are from, our lives all have the same value and we all get the same rights.

For bugs it may be different.
Torture or Inhuman Treatment

You cannot be tortured, bullied or treated in a way that is humiliating.

Refugees – people who leave where they live to seek safety in another country – often do so because their government cannot keep them safe, has not protected their basic rights, or has treated them badly.

Unfortunately, your teachers are still allowed to give you as much homework as they like.

Slavery or Forced or Compulsory Labour

No one can be made a slave or forced to work. A slave is not paid, but owned like a house or car.

Yet in a public emergency such as a hurricane, certain people, like police officers, can be required to carry out specific jobs that will help the country.

When your parents ask you to tidy your room or do other chores that is not slavery.

Personal Liberty

You are free to do what you want, as long as you obey the law and treat people the same way you want to be treated.

But you still have to eat your vegetables and be in bed when your mum and dad say so.
Treatment of Prisoners

People who break the law and are arrested or put in jail have the right to be treated fairly. Among other things, they should get regular meals and have access to medicine when they are not feeling well.

When you have been so naughty that you are sent to your room, you are still allowed to come out to eat and go to the bathroom when you need to.
Fair Trial

People charged with breaking the law have the right to a fair trial. A trial is when someone like a judge listens to what happened before deciding whether or not you have done something wrong.

Likewise, when you get into trouble your parents or teachers should allow you to explain what happened especially if you are being blamed for something that someone else has done and it is not your fault.

You are entitled to give your side of the story and to know what you are supposed to have done before you get punished.

No Punishment Without Law

You cannot be punished for something without a good reason. Our laws should be fair and necessary.

Your parents and teachers cannot punish you unfairly; they should set reasonable rules for you to follow and explain those rules to you.
Private and Family Life

Your family, home and what you say or write to others are protected. No one can come into your house unless they have permission to search you, your house or your things which includes your iPad, e-mails, or phone calls. If you are too young to say that a search is okay, the Courts or your parents can do that for you.

You should not be interrupted when you are in the bathroom or asked to turn out your pockets unless you are hiding the candy you were eating before dinner.
Conscience and Religion

No one can tell you what to think or believe about God or religion, unless your beliefs could harm others.

You have a choice. You should take the time to understand the differences and respect the choices of other people. Then you can make up your own mind.
Freedom of Expression

You have the right to voice opinions and express your views, either by yourself or in a group, unless doing so would be hurtful to others.

“Expression” includes the things you say and do to let others know how you are feeling and what you are thinking.

You should always try to tell the truth and not make things up about other people.

Assembly and Association

You can meet up with your friends and hang out with them as long as you don’t cause trouble or interfere with the rights of other people.

You should avoid holding late night parties and playing loud music that disturbs other people.

Marriage

You can get married and have children when you are old enough if you want to, but you cannot be forced.

If you get married, you and your husband or wife share the same rights and duties in relation to your children. Sometimes a judge will help decide what is best for your children if you don’t live with your husband or wife anymore.
Property

Property is any object that you own, like birthday presents or things you used your allowance to buy.

You have a right to enjoy these things. You can trade them, sell them or give them away if your parents say that is okay.

However, if your collection of toys gets so large that it spills over into your neighbour’s yard, you might be asked to get rid of them.
Non-discrimination

It doesn't matter who you are, whether you are a boy or a girl, what colour your skin is, how much money you have, who your parents are, where you come from, or where you live, what language you speak, whether or where you pray, how smart you are or how good you are at sports, you should be treated the same as everyone else.

Protection of Children

You have a number of special rights as a child because you are so very important.

You should be given the opportunity to develop, learn and accomplish your goals.

Your parents will ensure you never go hungry or homeless and are always happy and healthy. They are your guide to the world and when they can’t take care of you the Courts will help.

Always remember how much you are loved!

Environment

The Cayman Islands have unique native animals and plants, and the country is bordered by beautiful beaches and surrounded by clear waters. You enjoy these things and your children and grandchildren have the right to enjoy them too.

This rich heritage must be protected by means of laws and other actions.
Lawful Administrative Action

Our rights are defined by law. We choose a government to run the country according to the law.

They must make their decisions based in law, treat everyone fairly and give an explanation when they do not.
Education

You have the right to go to school and learn so that you can achieve all of the things you would like to when you are grown up.

Your mum and dad can choose to send you to a school that respects their religious beliefs.

An education has to be earned through hard work. You have a right to that opportunity so that when you are grown up you can protect the rights of your children too!
